

SARATOGA OF TURF CLASH TO ATTRACTION OF BOGA'S RACING SEASON TO-DAY

White-Barrett Battle May Lead to Big Bout

Result of Handicap Will Go Far to Settle Question of King of the Turf.

OTHER CRACKS ENGAGED

With Hotels Filled and Track at Its Best, Big Meeting Is Assured.

By HENRY V. KING.

SARATOGA, July 31.—Probably the greatest race meet ever held in this historic watering place will begin here to-morrow afternoon. Seldom if ever were there a greater gathering of high class thoroughbreds any place as there are here now.

The crowds might not come up to those of the last few years, but persons prominent socially and financially will be here in greater numbers than ever before.

Because of the large number of Western horses the meeting will take on an interesting aspect and several stakes will have an international flavor.

The historic track, which always has been the most beautiful in the country, has been improved in many respects and is now more beautiful than ever.

King May Be Crowned To-day.

The king of the turf is likely to be crowned on the opening day, when the Saratoga Handicap, for three-year-olds and upward, at one mile and a quarter, is decided.

Extremator at Its Best.

Mr. Kilmear's old cup gatherer never was a work horse, but he has done everything he has been asked to do well and kindly.

Prudery is in wonderful shape. This black daughter of Peter Pan and Polly Flinders turned a mile and a quarter for the race in 2:06 3/4, passing the mile in 1:33 1/2.

Big Field of Juveniles.

Half hour before the handicap which will practically decide the champion of the handicap division, the Preakness, for juveniles at five and a half furlongs, will be run.

It will bring out a big field of the best youngsters in the country and, as in the handicap, might show the racing world the best two-year-olds of the year.

Twenty-one colts and fillies have been named over night to start in it, and among them are several whirlwinds which will be making their racing debut.

CAVALRY IN CHESS TOURNEY

Defeats M. Euwe of Holland in First Round of International Masters Meeting.

LONDON, July 31 (Associated Press).—Jose R. Capablanca, world chess master, to-day defeated M. Euwe of Holland in the first round of the international tournament at which will be decided the world's championship.

Three games were drawn—those between S. Tartakover of Austria, and M. Morison; M. Rubenstein, Poland, and R. Reti, Hungary; and M. Euwe, Hungary, and M. Vidmar, Yugoslavia.

The other game, between Yates and Watson, was adjourned.

Andrew Bonar Law, Unionist leader in the House of Commons, in officially opening the international chess tournament to-day, which will decide the world championship, said chess players knew that a bout should be irresistible and, therefore, moved with circumspection, but that politicians sometimes became so adept at evading the consequences of their follies that they were not to be trusted.

The former Chancellor of the Exchequer said that during the war he sought some recreation which required such complete concentration of the faculties that grave preoccupations were obliterated for a time from his mind, and after trying many others he found in chess the ideal diversion.

Lord Dunsany, the playwright, who with the Lord Mayor of Westminster officially welcomed the players to London, said sometimes it was suggested that chess masters should turn their brilliant intellects to more practical uses, but personally he thought it best that they were content to occupy themselves with the game.

American Girl Athletes Leave To-day for Paris

Team Sails on Aquitania to Compete at Pershing Stadium August 30.

By the Associated Press.

When the Aquitania casts off her moorings to-day and sets out again for Europe it is possible that voyagers and those who go down to the Cunard pier to watch the giant liner pull will see mighty screens shutting off parts of the deck, wire netting over the saloon windows and possibly extra masts and cleats on the gigantic funnels and the anchors.

The Aquitania in her time has taken all sorts, sizes and conditions across the angry deep, but this time there is to be something new under the canopies of the storm deck, a bevy of girl athletes who are sailing for Paris, where they are to storm feminine Europe with something of the fire and dash and enthusiasm which was shown by their brothers, the Yanks, at Chateau Thierry, Belleau Wood and other points along the far flung lines of a few years back.

The girls who go aboard the Aquitania to-day also are on their way to wage a war but it is a war for glory on the athletic field. On the passenger list of the giant Cunard liner will be the names of a certain number of high jumpers, a certain number of weight throwers and so forth, and it is because of the presence of these sportily minded members of the so-called weak sex that the steamship this time is likely to put out to sea barricaded, battered and camouflaged like a battleship in war.

The officers of the ocean greyhound do not wish to see any of these fair athletes leap an inch or two too high while on their way over, suddenly over the mark and finish in the ocean.

Neither do they care to see one of the weight lifters pick up a funnel or an anchor or a windlass and toss it to Davy Jones.

The team is to leave to-day will be one short of the makeup which will turn out at Pershing Stadium. This is because Miss Maud Rosenbaum of Oakmere School, a New York girl, is already in Paris training for her specialty. Miss Rosenbaum is a long distance runner, so naturally requires a little more time for conditioning than the other members of the team, the personnel of which is:

Kathryn Agar, Chicago, Oakmere School; Janet Grey, Rye, N. Y., Oakmere School; Ester Green, Canal Zone, Balboa High School; Lucile Godbold, Estill, South Carolina, South Carolina College for Women; Frances Mead, Tarrytown, N. Y., Elizabeth Smith.

There are several other New York girls in the party who will be able to leap little Nancy from thinking too much of home and others from a few places as remote, for instance, as Miami, Fla. and even the Canal Zone.

Hoover Will Defend Gold Cup at Duluth

DULUTH, Minn., July 31.—Walter Hoover, world's amateur sculling champion, will defend the gold challenge cup in a special regatta here Labor Day, he announced to-day. The champion lowered the bar for all prospective challengers before leaving for Philadelphia, where he is entered in a special exhibition.

Hilton Belyea of St. John, N. B., who reestablished his claim to the sculling championship of Canada at the Canadian Henley, will be one of Hoover's competitors for the cup.
